In addition, a study that investigated the effect of aftercare on the quality of life of cancer survivors in Turkey concluded that cancer survivors who participated in aftercare programs reported higher quality of life and that this effect was more effective in the quality of life of survivors at the level of G~2~ \[{@B36-ijerph-16-00682}\]. Therefore, in order to assess the effects of different programs on cancer survivors, the effects of aftercare on the quality of life of cancer survivors should be investigated by evaluating the effects of programs on the quality of life of survivors of different cancer types. 5. Conclusions {#sec5-ijerph-16-00682} ============== This study demonstrated that different programs for cancer survivors have different effects on the quality of life of cancer survivors. The findings of this study also show that cancer survivors who participate in aftercare programs have a higher quality of life. However, there were still some limitations in this study, and therefore, further research should be conducted on the effects of aftercare on the quality of life of cancer survivors of different cancer types. The authors wish to thank all the hospitals in Turkey and the non-profit organizations that provided information for this study. Y.K.S. and E.K.

Example: Your food meal has a cost of $20. You are served three bites of your main course, which is $6 a bite. So your number of bites of meal is: (($20 * 3) / 3 = $60 / bite You are then served two bites of dessert, which is $10 a bite, so your number of bites is: (($20 * 2) * 2) / 2 = $40 / bite You are then served two bites of appetizer, which is $6 a bite, so your number of bites is: (($20 * 2) * 2) / 2 = $40 / bite Then you are served two bites of your soup, which is $2.
