See Info/File InfoThe City of Modesto must repay $3.2 million to the Fiscally Stable and Sustainable Fresno Valley, officials told the Fresno City Council Wednesday. Joining city officials were Fresno County Supervisor Larry O'Neill and the Fresno Valley Economic Development Corporation. "The Fresno Valley would like to be your partner," O'Neill said. The City of Modesto has been in talks with the Valley Regional Economic Partnership for more than a year to negotiate an agreement that would expand the existing development agreement between the City of Modesto and the Valley, which includes more than 12 jurisdictions stretching from the foothills of the Sierra Nevada mountain range to central Fresno and into the Central Valley. "It would be a financial benefit to bring those two parts together," O'Neill said. "This was the community's wish all along." Chief Administrative Officer Trey Murphy told the council the Fresno deal, worth $5 million annually, is more beneficial for the Valley because it will eliminate two city ordinances, the Part 2 development agreement for residential development and the Part 3 agreement for commercial development. "The city has experienced a double whammy of what this agreement does because of two ordinances that are eliminated in exchange for the Valley," Murphy said. The Valley agreed to do more work with the city, Murphy

As I stepped off of the plane - I contemplated the now familiar clouds and thought, "how wonderful to be able to see those clouds everyday - just not in a straight line". Although it was also a familiar mind-set to myself, I reflected on the beauty of a wide and open sky and a new vision of the mountaintop. An understanding of how far I have come in my life. How far I have yet to go. And how this beautiful, northern mountain top will become my new home. I found solace in a wonderful man, who I affectionately call AWOL, along with a wonderful new vision of the mountain top. He has brought so many new opportunities to me in the past few years. New friends, new opportunities, and most importantly, a truly new way of living. He is a songwriter, and although I
