Layers allow users to create many different masks, which are used to mask an image. Users can create additional layers called adjustment layers, which enable them to use images as a base and manipulate them to change and tweak the way they look. Once users have created and saved their images, they can then print the images or save them to a disc or an online server. This post is about the java runtime. I've installed Eclipse Juno and JDK 1.7, the installer found both java versions and set them to be used when I open the program. When I run the program, it doesn't seem to use the one set as default by the installer. It uses the jvm bundled with eclipse instead of the one eclipse downloaded from the jdks website. When I run from eclipse it works fine, but the results come to a browser as html How do I set the default java version for Eclipse so it works like this? A: If you don't have those entries in the JRE to point to the correct JRE, Eclipse will use the ones defined in the OS (the 2 JRE's are different). Members of the Los Angeles Police Department who used excessive force during the 2015 raid on warehouse known as the "Ghost Ship" — a historic art and performance space in the city's arts district — will see their use-of-force records expunged following a city Ethics Commission ruling. The city voted unanimously in September to expunge the records of all six officers involved in the raid, in which scores of partygoers ended up trapped in the building and at least two died. The commission ruled in April that LAPD Chief Charlie Beck's discipline of the officers was improper. LAPD Deputy Chief Michel Moore told The Times he was disappointed the commission did not order all six officers' records be expunged. But, in the end, the decision that the records be expunged was not his to make. "We appealed that decision," Moore said. "This was the penalty of the decision that was rendered." The commission did not tell the LAPD how to proceed with the record expungement.

Speaking with the Austrian, Noam Chomsky outlines his thoughts on the Israeli bombing of civilian targets in Gaza and accuses Israel of a 'war of aggression.' In this episode of Unbelievable But True, the Infowars team details the growing body of evidence that Israel was behind the recent wave of missile attacks on civilian targets in Gaza. The IDF refused to comment on whether they had placed a time-sensitive strike on Hamas leader Mahmoud al-Mabhouh or whether it was at all connected to a recent wave of air strikes in the coastal territory. The most recent offensive was the most extensive since the 2008-2009 military operation known as Cast Lead, which resulted in the deaths of over 1,400 Palestinians and a United Nations estimate of over 10,000. According to reports in the New York Times, the Israelis warned that their targets included weapons caches and rocket-launching facilities. Despite the IDF claims, several news agencies reported that there had been no military activity in the targeted buildings. The Times reports that senior Israeli officials are reportedly considering legal action in an attempt to block the release of footage that shows Israeli operatives preparing the attack by sealing a targeted building with roof-mounted machinery and erecting a mesh barrier around it. Furthermore, the newspaper cites Israeli leaders as claiming that the strikes are justified by the Palestinians' use of civilian infrastructure. The statements come as Israeli officials are apparently keen to make amends for the deadly strike, which they maintain was launched in error.
