The various error correction and checking module operations are generally coordinated and performed in association with a single bus of the system. More particularly, multiple operations of several error checking and correcting modules are generally involved. For example, an error correcting and checking module may check the data and an error may be injected for the data. A subsequent module might then correct the data. A problem with earlier protocols for operating an error correcting and checking module is the need to have the data transmit along the bus on different wires according to various operations to be performed on the data. For example, when data is sent along a bus, it is packaged with additional data in a series of frames. The additional data in each frame is updated by information on the executed operations. A reference is generally not provided to distinguish the "operations" to identify and to distinguish specific error correction or checking protocol operations.The Boring Company is an LA-based tunneling business out of Elon Musk's SpaceX.
